About IMPACTathon

Thomson Reuters is dedicated to creating a positive impact on communities through pro bono work. The IMPACTathon is an event that connects nonprofit organizations with TR employees in respective fields, who provide their time pro bono to develop solutions. This event provides access to operational skillsets and expertise for nonprofits, while offering an opportunity for TR employee volunteers to use their skills for social good, develop new skills, and gain exposure to new communities and work styles.

In May 2024, Thomson Reuters hosted our fourth annual IMPACTathon. This year's theme showcased the enduring benefits of pro bono consulting through recurring participation from both dedicated employees and trusting nonprofit partners as well as improvements in overall satisfaction and anticipated impact from the deliverables received.

In total, employees volunteered 975 hours which is valued at an average of $5,500 in pro bono consulting per organization, all at no cost to them.

“In a world of givers and takers, Thomson Reuters is a hands-down giver. The IMPACTathon draws on the company’s greatest asset: highly competent, innovative, and empathetic employees. The IMPACTathon is a testament to the power of collective action in driving meaningful change”

Top Outcomes

Increasing impact and improving outcomes year-over-year

- 93% of nonprofits anticipate that the project deliverable will provide significant learning to the organization and staff, an 11% increase from last year
- 86% of nonprofits anticipate that the project deliverable will strengthen their organization's infrastructure, a 4% increase from last year
- 85% of consultants stated that the project allowed them to stretch in a new or different way, a 6% increase from last year
- 85% of consultants stated that the project enhanced “soft” skills such as communication, adaptability, empathy, and nimbleness, a 1% increase from last year

Top Outcomes

The case for return participants

Impressive results as a standalone event itself, this year's outcomes also showcase the enduring benefits of the IMPACTathon through recurring participation from both dedicated employees and trusting nonprofit partners. As volunteers return year after year, they bring with them a deepening understanding of the nonprofit sector's unique challenges and opportunities, enabling them to deliver more nuanced and effective solutions. Similarly, nonprofit organizations that have participated more than once benefit from the continuity of support, allowing them to build upon previous projects, refine strategies, and implement long-term improvements.

Over the past four years, 63 employees and 23 nonprofit organizations have participated in at least two IMPACTathons, with an average of 95% of this year's total participant pool interested in participating in IMPACTathon again.

- 97% of nonprofits are interested in another IMPACTathon, a 5% increase from last year
- 93% of pro bono consultants are interested in another IMPACTathon, holding steady from last year
- 48% of pro bono consultants plan to continue supporting the nonprofit on their own time (fully outside of the commitment of IMPACTathon) – a 10% increase from last year, showing that the relationships established at IMPACTathon can develop into lasting high-potential partnerships.
